A special screening of “Bloodlines” will be shown on Friday May 29, 2015 at the historic Paramount Theater at 6:30 PM, and is centrally located in downtown OKC. Located at 701 W Sheridan, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73102.

“Bloodlines” has been featured in several film festivals, and was featured at the prestigious Pan African Film Festival (PAFF) in Los Angeles CA in 2012. PAFF was established in 1992 by award winning Actor Danny Glover. PAFF is a non-profit corporation dedicated to the promotion of cultural and racial tolerance and understanding through the exhibition of film, art and creative expression. The original version of Bloodlines debuted in 2010; the final version of the film will be shown at the festival on May 29, 2015 at the Paramount Theater and is very different from the original version.

Synopsis:

In 1979, the Muscogee Creek Nation exclude African descendants (known as Creek Freedmen) from the tribe, and did not permit them to vote in the 1979 election even though they were adopted as tribal citizens with full rights by a treaty signed in 1866 between the United States and the Creek Nation. “Bloodlines” examines the struggle that the African Creek descendants of the Creek Tribe have had in claiming tribal citizenship despite history showing many African Americans and Native Americans cohabiting, intermarrying, and forming communities in Indian Territory circa the mid-1800s.
